Rachel Faucette & Peter Lytton
Referenced by: Company & George Washington
Line: “Alex got better but his mother went quick. Moved in with a cousin his cousin committed suicide.”

Rachel Faucette, Alexander Hamilton’s mother, died of yellow fever when Hamilton was an adolescent. He and his brother, now orphans after the prior desertion of their father were taken in by their cousin, Peter Lytton, who subsequently took his own life a little over a year later.

Sam Adams
Referenced by: John Laurens
Line: “I’m John Laurens in the place to be! Two pints o’ Sam Adams, but I’m workin’ on three, uh!”

“Founding Father” and political philosopher who was the second cousin of President John Adams. Samuel Adams founded the “Sons of Liberty” in 1765 to fight taxation from the British government. Thomas Jefferson credited Adams with being a leading figure in steering the colonies towards independence. However, you may know him as the face of the Boston Beer Company.

Samuel Seabury
Referenced by: Himself
Line: “Hear ye, hear ye! My name is Samuel Seabury and I present: “Free Thoughts on the Proceedings of the Continental Congress!”

Admiral Richard Howe, 1st Earl Howe
Referenced by: Company

British naval officer who commanded troops in The Seven Years’ War, The American Revolution and The French Revolution. This line refers to Britain’s strategy of capturing major cities by blockading the coastline. They did so successfully, seizing Long Island in August 1776 and New York City the following month.

Nathanael Greene & Henry Knox
Referenced by: George Washington
Line: “Nathanael Greene and Henry Knox wanted to hire you…”

Both were Continental Army military officers that served under George Washington during the American Revolution. Nathanael Greene declined an appointment by Washington to serve in the first presidential cabinet and it was Henry Knox who ended up accepting, becoming the first Secretary of War, a position which he held from 1789-1794.

Charles Henry Lee
First Referenced in: “Stay Alive”
Referenced by: Alexander Hamilton

Major General for the Continental Army who was captured and held by the British for sixteen months. Upon his release, he often dissented with General Washington and frequently questioned his leadership. His lack of communication and questionable battlefield tactics at the Battle of Monmouth led him to be court-martialed for his actions. Lee was found guilty on three counts, ending his military career.

Martha Washington
Referenced by: Aaron Burr
Line: “Martha Washington named her feral tomcat after him.”

Married George Washington in 1759 after being widowed at age 25. Although she and Washington had no children together they raised two of her surviving children from her first marriage. She was the original “First Lady,” although that term would not be coined until after her death.

Ben Franklin
Referenced by: Angelica Schuyler
Line: “It’s Ben Franklin with a key and a kite! You see it right?”

Despite being a key component to the American Revolution and Founding Father, the only reference to Ben Franklin is Angelica comparing his electricity experiment to her feelings upon first meeting Alexander Hamilton. Among his many accomplishments, Franklin served as the first U.S. ambassador to France, first Postmaster General of the United States and founded the University of Pennsylvania.
Theodosia Bartow Prevost was the wife of British Army officer Jacques Marcus Prevost. However, during the American Revolution she used her home to quarter revolutionaries. This is where she met Aaron Burr and they began a romantic relationship in secret. However, in true Burr fashion, he “Waited For It” and didn’t marry Prevost until after her husband’s death.

Jonathan Edwards, Aaron Burr Sr, & Esther Edwards Burr

Jonathan Edwards, Aaron Burr’s grandfather, was one of the first American theologians. His sermon, “Sinners in the Hand of an Angry God” is considered one of the first classic pieces of American literature and is often credited with helping to shape the revival of religious devotion in colonial America. Aaron Burr Sr was also a minister and founded the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University. The journal of Esther Edwards Burr, Aaron Burr’s mother, has provided key insights for historians into early colonial life.

Betsy Ross

Seamstress who spent over 50 years making flags for the United States armed forces. American folklore credits Betsy Ross with creating the modern design of the American Flag. However, there is no conclusive, documented evidence to support this. The only source we have is the testimony of her relatives nearly a century later.

Jean-Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, comte de Rochambeau

French general who served as commander-in-chief of “Expédition Particulière,” the code name given to French forces who were sent to North America to aid the Continental Army in defeating the British during the American Revolution.

Levi Weeks

The defendant in the first recorded murder trial in U.S. history. Weeks was accused of killing “Elma” Sands, a young woman he had been courting at the time. With the aid of family connections and wealth he was able to hire some of the most prominent attorneys in New York for his defense team: Henry Brockholst Livingston, Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton. Much to public disapproval, Weeks was acquitted after less than five minutes of jury deliberation. Although the show depicts the trial taking place prior to the Constitutional Convention of 1787, it actually took place in 1800.

John Jay

First Chief Justice of the United States and second Governor of New York. Using the shared pseudonym, Publius, John Jay, Alexander Hamilton and James Madison advocated for a stronger centralized government in “The Federalist Papers.” They felt the current structure under the “Articles of Confederation” was too weak and could not be sustained. The topic of most of Jay’s essays dealt with the dangers of foreign power and influence.
Sally Hemings
Referenced in: “What’d I Miss?”
Referenced by: Thomas Jefferson
Line: “There’s a letter on my desk from the president. Haven’t even put my bag down yet. Sally be a lamb darlin’, won’tcha open it?”

Enslaved woman who is believed to have borne six of Thomas Jefferson’s children. Although this assertion was initially doubted, modern DNA evidence has led historians to believe this to be the case. In 2018 The Jefferson Foundation of Monticello opened an exhibit honoring Hemings’ life. Although there are very little autobiographical accounts from Hemings herself, it is believed she wielded an extraordinary amount of power for the time, negotiating unprecedented privileges for herself and her children.

Maria & James Reynolds
Referenced in: “Say No to This”
Referenced by: Alexander Hamilton
Line: “You’ve never seen a bastard orphan more in need of a break. Longing for Angelica. Missing my wife. That’s when Miss Maria Reynolds walked into my life.”

Alexander Hamilton’s affair with Maria Reynolds is considered the first political sex scandal in U.S. history. Upon learning of their encounters, James Reynolds blackmailed Hamilton for nearly a year. In response, Hamilton published “The Reynolds Pamphlet,” making his exploits public and effectively debilitating his political career and personal life. When Maria finally decided to separate from James she hired a prominent New York attorney as her divorce lawyer: Aaron Burr.

General Hugh Mercer, Jr.
Referenced in: “The Room Where It Happens”
Referenced by: Aaron Burr
Line: “Didja hear the news about good old General Mercer?”

Brigadier General in the Continental Army and close friend of George Washington who was fatally wounded at the Battle of Princeton. As referenced in the song, Clermont St. in Greenwich Village was renamed Mercer St. in his honor in 1799 and still bears his name.

Philip Schuyler
Referenced in: “Schuyler Defeated”
Referenced by: Philip Hamilton
Line: “Look! Grandpa’s in the paper! War hero Philip Schuyler loses Senate seat to young upstart Aaron Burr!”

Served as a general in the American Revolution and spent nearly a decade as a New York State Senator. He also served in the first United States Congress as a New York Senator for two years before being unseated by Aaron Burr.

John Adams
First Reference: “I Know Him”
First Referenced by: King George III
Line: “John Adams?! I know him. That can’t be. That’s that little guy who spoke to me.”

The second President of the United States and first Vice President. This line references the first meeting between John Adams and King George III on June 1, 1785 while Adams was serving as America’s first ambassador to Great Britain. His son, John Quincy Adams was later elected sixth President of the United States.

George Eacker
Referenced in: “Blow Us All Away”
Referenced by: Philip Hamilton
Line: “Ladies, I’m lookin’ for a Mr. George Eacker. Made a speech last week, our Fourth of July speaker.”

Philip Hamilton confronted George Eacker at the Park Theatre in November of 1801. Uncomplimentary words were exchanged ending with Hamilton challenging Eacker to a duel. Hamilton’s intention was to engage in a “delope,” a common practice at the time to intentionally miss your target to avoid injury and maintain honor. Unlike in the show, Eacker fired first, but did not do so prematurely. In fact, roughly a minute of both parties doing nothing transpired before Eacker fired and fatally stuck Hamilton.

William P. Van Ness & Nathaniel Pendleton
Referenced in: “The World Was Wide Enough”
Referenced by: Aaron Burr
Line: “We rode across the Hudson at dawn. My Friend William P. Van Ness signed on as my- Number two! Hamilton arrived with his crew: Nathaniel Pendleton and a doctor that he knew”

Both William P. Van Ness and Nathaniel Pendleton were United States District Judges who served as the “second” for Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton, respectively. In the aftermath they issued a joint-statement regarding the proceedings. Although they could not reach consensus on who fired first, it is widely accepted that two shots were fired.
